RIGHTO!

The Rafiman's Journal in commenting on the national delegate election to be held this year makes some very pertinent comments which, if one did not see the heading on the paper, might believe was from the editorial column of what is popularly termed an independent newspaper. We quote:

"We do not believe in 'set ups' nor do we believe in combinations in restraint of office seeking a bit more than in restraint of trade, declared illegal by the government."

Thus we have the inference that there has been a "set up." Be that as it is, the Journal goes on to say that Centre and Clearfield counties should send the delegates to Chicago which argument is based on what the editor call the "the equity of the case." While putting forth the claim of Centre and Clearfield County there is no word of cheer or endorsement for H. B. Scott of Centre who has already announced but in the following words the possibility of Leslie Stewart throwing his hat in the ring is heartily endorsed:

"The name of Leslie Stewart has been mentioned by a great many persons and he would measure up to all the requirements of a National delegate at this time. He is a Republican because a good man cannot be anything else, he is right on the many public questions now agitating the country and any man that isn't right should not ask for political preferment, when such preferment has to do with the people and the industries of the country."

Frenchman Must Pay More Attention to Physical Development in War

By Prof. Robert Emmett Monroe

I am going back to France to help the French in the devastated regions, and this is why: The French, with whom I have practically lived for six months, have repeatedly told me that they expect another war. They believe that they will be oppressed again by the same enemy. They feel that they must fit themselves for such an emergency. How? Well, they have said to me, these French soldiers: "You Americans were the better fighters—we were the better soldiers. You were the better fighters because you Americans were more physically fit. And you Americans have taught us Frenchmen that we must pay more attention to physical development."

They are in need of our sympathy. Sometimes I find that our own Americans do not understand them fully until they are taught to realize the depth of their sacrifice. The Frenchman does not flout it. In fact, he belittles his troubles and his achievements. He says: "It does one good to make fun of oneself."

GOOD ARRANGEMENT OF ROADWAYS ON ANY FARM WILL SAVE BOTH TIME AND LABOR

The Diagram Given Herewith Shows a Good Arrangement of Drives and Lanes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Good-road building, like charity, should begin at home. This is another way of stating that private roads on the farm are as important to the interests they serve as the public roads over which the farmer's product is hauled to market.

In proportion to its use a poor private road to a farm is as great a handicap to efficient marketing as well as to other farm operations, as a poor public highway. The fundamental principle involved in the construction of the two kinds of roads is the same, according to the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture. But, as the farm road is called on to bear far less traffic, the ordinary methods of construction and maintenance are so modified and the use of materials so adapted as to meet the special requirements and reduce the cost. To build the farm roads in the same manner and design as public thoroughfares which carry much greater traffic, in general, would be a useless waste of money.

The first consideration is the location of the roads and paths about the farm. The roads and paths are a part of the permanent farm plant. Consequently they should be so located as to serve best the purpose for which they are intended, should fit in with the general scheme of the farm and at the same time should avoid, as much as possible, places which would require difficult and expensive construction or maintenance. The main consideration, however, must be to secure the highest degree of efficiency from the farm plant as a whole.

Ideal Arrangement of Lanes.
The accompanying diagram, showing an ideal arrangement of farm buildings as well as of connecting lanes and drives, offers helpful suggestions to the farmer who is planning new vehicle ways in the immediate vicinity of his farm house. This particular arrangement is for a farmstead occupying a corner lot, which permits a separate entrance from the public road, shown at the right side of the diagram, is a convenience in case stock is to be driven to the market, in that the animals need not be driven past the house, thereby subjecting shrubs, trees and the lawn to possible damage. One feature that should be taken into consideration in planning the roads near the farmhouse is the direction of the prevailing winds. In this instance the main entrance to the drive have been located to the north of the house, so that dust from them will ordinarily be carried away from the dwelling.

The earth road is the most common type of farm road and will probably so remain. When properly crowned, drained and maintained with the split-log drag or other similar device, the earth road, on all but a few exceptional soils or in a few places immediately around the farm lots and buildings, can be made to answer the requirements fairly well. A little grading will in general give the earth road a crown sloping from the center toward the side ditches at the rate of about one inch to the foot, and side ditches of sufficient size to carry away the storm water can usually be constructed without difficulty. If the ground is springy, the side ditches may be made deeper, or the ground water may be carried away by tile drains.

Good Drainage Essential.
The fundamental requirement of an earth road is always good drainage. This involves, first, the removal of the water which reaches the surface of the road from precipitation or otherwise; and second, in certain places the removal of any ground water which seeps up. Surface drainage is accomplished by securing a reasonable firm crowned roadway and providing ditches of sufficient size and with ample grade and frequent outlets. Sub-drainage to remove the water from beneath the road surface or to prevent its passage into the roadway is usually accomplished most effectively by so-called blind drains or by means of properly located tile drains.

Roads and drives immediately around the farmyards and barns which are used very frequently are usually of sufficient importance to warrant some surface improvement. Inexpensive Surfacing Materials. Many of the materials ordinarily employed in road construction will be found too expensive for use in improving the farm roads. One or more of the following will, however, usually be found available and within the means of the farmer for surfacing his roads and paths: Gravel, mixtures of sand and clay, cinders, brickbats from old buildings, brickyard waste, and quarry waste. The material selected should be hard enough to withstand crushing under heavy loads and possess sufficient binding power to compact well and maintain a firm, hard surface.

Drainage and a good foundation are the first considerations in improving a road with a hard surface. The best possible foundation is a good earth road with a low crown. Earth should be graded upon each side to prevent the surfacing material from spreading, as in the construction of an ordinary macadam road. The material used for surfacing should be placed in a uniform layer or layers on this foundation and should be given a sufficient crown to shed the rain waters to the sides. If a road roller can be secured the material may be quickly consolidated.

During this process the road should receive frequent attention with a split-log drag or other means for smoothing the surface and filling the ruts. On steep grades where there would be a tendency for the side ditches to wash, this can usually be overcome by providing outlets and getting the water away from the road before it accumulates in large volume. On roads where wagons will not be required to pass each other, a width of from nine to twelve feet between ditches will usually be sufficient. The surfacing portion need rarely exceed seven or eight feet, though it can be carried to the ditches to advantage. There is no particular virtue in building a farm road wider than is necessary to answer the special traffic requirements. The need or desirability of moving occasionally extra wide or heavy implements, such as certain harvesting machines, over the road should, however, not be lost sight of. A little foresight in the alignment of ditches, or in providing ample width of gates, or in giving extra strength to culverts, may save a great deal of both annoyance and delay during some very busy period.

Making Good Footpaths.
For surfacing footpaths, gravel, mixtures of sand and clay, and cinders will, in general, give great satisfaction. Too often the mistake is made of building a path so low that it becomes a drainage channel. Concrete makes a most excellent walk, and is now widely used for this purpose. Full details as to mixing and placing concrete for walks and other uses on the farm are given in Farmers' Bulletin No. 461, "The Use of Concrete on the Farm," which may be had free from the United States department of agriculture.

GRASSHOPPERS NEXT SEASON

Killing by Poisoning and Plowing Are Most Effective Ways of Guarding 1920 Crop.

Each female grasshopper lays from 80 to 100 eggs, in clusters of 40 to 80 in small holes about 1½ inches below the surface of the ground. Mr. Stewart Lockwood, entomologist for the North Dakota Agricultural college, says that if these eggs are allowed to hatch next year's crops are in serious danger. He states that killing by poisoning and plowing are the two most effective ways of safeguarding the 1920 crop. This year it was found that very few if any grasshoppers hatched out on plowed land. Sixty per cent of the hoppers came from roadsides, fence rows, flax stubble land, and 40 per cent from land that was stubbled into crop the fall of 1918.

The Bees
The following incident testifies to the remarkable sagacity and efficiency of bees. A hive was being "spied upon" by a wasp. When wasps ascertain a hive is worth attacking they often succeed in ousting the bees. Every time the wasp approached the small entrance hole a bee came out. An hour later the wasp was dead.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

Alma Bloom, a three year old girl, died at the home of her parents at Bloomington on Monday of consumption. Her remains were interred in the Bloomington cemetery yesterday afternoon.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Guy Forcey, at their home on Ridge avenue, on Monday, a daughter.

Bert Sipes, residing on Susquehanna avenue, South Side, is confined to his home by illness. He occupies a position as one of the foremen at the Summit Sled Leather Tannery.

Some time during Tuesday night or Wednesday morning, some person or persons made an attempt to burglarize the drug store of Jay Murphy.

Entrance was gained by springing the lock on the front door back far enough to allow the door to swing clear. Evidently the thief or thieves were frightened away before they had a chance to do any looting, as Mr. Murphy upon his arrival at the store found everything just as he had left it on closing the store late in the evening. Officer Clark is of the opinion that the work was done by someone about town, and had forced an entrance to the store in the hope of finding booze. Suspicion is pointing a finger at several persons, whose arrests may follow at any time.

Mrs. Richard Lantz was the recipient of a costly Christmas present at the hands of her father, Gerritt Caldwell, consisting of the handsome brick dwelling house situated on the corner of Main and Pine streets. The property's value is not less than $5000.

William Knarr, residing along the Bloomington road died at the home of a daughter in Punxsutawney Tuesday, where he had gone to spend the holidays. About a year ago he purchased the John Caldwell property at the top of Irvin Hill, where he and his family resided. He was married to Miss Julia Garrison, a daughter of the late John Garrison, who survives him with several grown up children. His age was between 55 and 60 years. For some years he has been crippled and was compelled to use crutches, having been injured while working on a saw mill. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity. His remains were brought to Curwensville on Friday, the funeral taking place from the Presbyterian church. Interment in Oak Hill cemetery.

Charles E. Grace, of Clearfield, and Miss Lettie C. Jones of this place, were married at the home of the bride in Curwensville on Wednesday evening, December 24th at 8:30 o'clock by Rev. Dixon of Clearfield. Only the immediate families of the contracting parties were present to witness the ceremony. The young couple will make their home in Clearfield.

Frank Jones and daughter, of Williamsport, were Curwensville visitors this week, and were guests of Mr. Jones' half brothers, Messrs. Daniel and Owen Jones.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Moody, of Pottsville, Pa., are visitors in the family of Mrs. Ray Brown, a sister of Mr. Moody.

Day Kirk and wife, of Pittsburg, came to Curwensville in order that they might be with Mr. Kirk's mother Mrs. A. M. Kirk, over Christmas. After spending a few days in town, they left for New York. Mr. Kirk, being one of the officials of a large coal company, was called to attend a directors' meeting in that city. Mr. Kirk has, by efficiency and strict attention to his profession, become quite well known in the coal fields and by men largely connected with coal mining.

Sheridan Matley a foreman at the brick yard, is confined to his home by an attack of chicken pox.

The students attending the the public schools were given a half holiday yesterday, and a chance of compiling a lot of New Year resolutions.

Ed. Wise, who made his home at D. C. Heineberger's, and who has suffered two operations in the Clearfield Hospital, is reported as getting along nicely, and expects to leave that institution shortly.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE By Mary Graham Donner

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

The Old Year and the New Year were seeing each other, and the New Year was talking of plans for 1920 while the Old Year talked of what had happened during 1919.

"Well," said the Old Year, "I am going to make up a poem about myself. I feel quite poetical."

"And," said the New Year, "I will, too." For the New Year didn't want to have the Old Year think that he was unable to do anything like that, even though he was young. He was rather proud and rather sure of himself, you see.

He didn't know much about poetry, and yet he didn't want to say so. But he felt very much pleased when the Old Year said: "Though I have lived twelve whole months, I have not become a poet. Writing poetry is not the thing I do best. But no matter, it is fun once in a while to write a little verse."

Yes, the New Year was much relieved to hear the Old Year say that he wasn't much on writing poetry, and no one could expect much of a year which was only just beginning.

And when I say that the New Year was relieved, mean that he didn't feel he had to worry about it any more, and if the Old Year had not

"My First Attempt."

said that, he might have worried for fear his poetry would sound very young beside that of the Old Year.

"Well, let's begin," said the Old Year.

"I think age should be given the right to speak first," said the New Year.

"All right," said the Old Year. "Here goes, then."

The Old Year shook his white hair and smiled so that the wrinkles in his face all ran in together.

This is what he said:

Nineteen-nineteen was feeling old. Nineteen-nineteen was also old. Nineteen-nineteen heard them cheer. Welcoming in the glad New Year.

Then New Year recited this verse:

Nineteen-nineteen was out for fun. His life had only just begun. He was young and full of vim. No one could help but welcome him.

"Of course," he added, "you mustn't think I am conceited. I say a lot to make my rhyme come out right."

"Of course," said the Old Year, "for I do, too. Well, I will give my second verse. Don't believe it all though!"

"I wish," said the New Year, "you'd give all the rest yourself."

"You're so much more of a poet than I am. It's my first attempt, and while it may be all right, I don't believe I could go on."

"All right," said the Old Year, "I'll go on. This is jolly—ending up the year and beginning the other with these verses. I believe I'll sing the rest of mine."

So the Old Year took an old harp he had and he began to play and sing and this was what he sang:

"Nineteen-nineteen almost went. As he packed up his things and left. But as he turned to say good-by, Something in him made him cry: 'Though my work is mostly done, I, too, have had lots of fun. And 'ere I go upon my way. This I certainly would say: 'Happy New Year, big and small. Happy New Year, short and tall. Happy New Year, every one. May you all have lots of fun!'"

"Fine," said the New Year. "And though your voice is old—a whole year old—still it doesn't sound cracked."

"You must have been a nice year to have kept so young in so many ways."

"Ah," said the Old Year, "all the years have such a good time. Wait until you've been in the world a year. You will have seen so much to make you feel young and happy though you are old and must make way for another year. Wait and see! Good-by! Happy New Year!"

Take the World We Find.

We must take the world as we find it; there is no avoiding that. But we ought not to leave the world as we found it; there would be no excuse for that. A large share of our proper work in life ought to be in the line of seeing to it that the world shall be better, when we leave it, than it was when we entered it, simply because we have been in it. Otherwise our life is a failure.—Selected.

Boxing Fans Hoot Stalling Fighters

Referee Edwards Stops Fiasco At End of Ninth Round After Warning Men To Play Fair

SUCH EXHIBITIONS HURT SPORT

Clearfield boxing fans and Manager McCowan of the Clearfield Athletic club were given a raw deal New Year's afternoon by Johnny Wolgast, of Lancaster and Kid Sheeler, of Philadelphia, who were scheduled to put on a ten round boxing exhibition at the Driggs theatre.

The show had been pretty well advertised and several hundred local and out of town boxing enthusiasts were present when after three or four good preliminaries Referee "Tunk" Edwards announced the "crime of the afternoon." Referee Edwards sort of prepared the wise ones for what was coming when he announced the principals desired to have the bout cut from ten to six rounds. The crowd demanded the scheduled number of rounds and the alleged scrapers then made their way reluctantly to the ring.

They started right in to slap and stall and before the first round ended the spectators were on and began to "beat" the scrapers. The second round was worse than the first and everybody got right up in arms. The boxers stalled along until the seventh and began to file out. Referee Edwards stopped the fiasco long enough to inform the fighters that they would have to fight or they would get no money. This quieted the crowd and they returned to their seats.

The men then stalled through another round and were lovingly tapping each other in the ninth when the Referee stopped further proceedings and the pikers were hooted out of the ring.

Wolgast had appeared in Clearfield twice previously and had made many friends by his aggressive tactics in the ring, but never again for cars. This was Sheeler's first appearance in Clearfield and again was very much enough or too much if that sounds better.

Such exhibitions as these men gave hurt the sport and is greatly regretted by the management and friends of boxing. The management has been endeavoring to and up to this time had succeeded in putting on clean, classy shows. They were not to blame for this exhibition and will attempt to square themselves by keeping away from such tin horn sports as Wolgast and Sheeler in the future.

The preliminaries consisted of wrestling bouts between D'Augustino and Meise, and Bill Gardiner and Ward Latschaw. They were well worth seeing. Gardiner is the best 145 pound wrestler in Central Pennsylvania, bar nobody, and challenges any man of his weight to meet him on the mat at any time and place.

Young Cole and Sammy Sansone put up a slashing six round bout. Cole had a little more science but Sammy was at him hammer and tongs all the way.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts to flush out your Kidneys and neutralize irritating acids.

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again. Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effective, uric acid-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

TURN HAIR DARD WITH SAGE TEA

Grandma kept her locks dark, glossy and youthful with a simple mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustrous and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

THE GLASS CASKET CORPORATION

Is The Great New Opportunity For Investors Today

The year of 1919 has been a wonderful year with our company. We have succeeded in practically completing our new plant at Altoona and expect that during the month of March of the incoming year; we will start the fires under the huge glass furnace, and at this time next year we will be employing between 400 and 700 men and women.

That means that the stockholders in the Glass Casket Corporation will indeed have a prosperous year, not only in 1920 but for many years to come for our market is unlimited, and the possibilities of profits very great.

Any man or woman can recognize the merits of an investment proposition AFTER it has become a success. But the man or woman who amasses riches is the one who can recognize merit BEFORE the proposition has been developed into a success,--the one who cashes in big by investing in a proposition at the very start.

Stories of great fortunes are the stories of new inventions and new ideas that make good. America has remarkable examples of this in the Libbey Glass Company, the Owens Bottle Machine Company, the Bell Telephone Company, the National Cash Register, the Eastman Kodak Company and scores of others. Trace any of these industries back to their beginning and you will find that hundreds of people sneered at them, where one was foresighted enough to invest in them. The Glass Casket Corporation is the great NEW opportunity for investors today. Like the marvelous successful companies listed above, it is organized to manufacture a WORLD NECESSITY, and it controls valuable patents. It has the exclusive rights to operate in the eleven great Eastern states. It opens up a field never before touched, and its prospects are for profits that are amazing. Most men recognize opportunity only when it has passed them by,--AND MOST MEN ARE POOR ALL THEIR LIVES. Here you are brought face to face with opportunity! Can you recognize it?

We invite you to call at our Clearfield office as our Representative will be unable to call on everyone personally but will be glad to do so if necessary. We have established a sales office in Clearfield for your convenience, and the opportunity is now offered you to become a stockholder in this new industrial enterprise. No preferred stock will be issued. No Bonds will be floated, only common stock will be sold, thus insuring that EVERY stock holder will share in every cent the corporation earns.

Practical Frocks of Silk or Wool

Two afternoon frocks of the simple and unpretentious sort that prove most useful are shown in the picture above. One of them is in taffeta silk in a dark blue and the other in wool tricotine in the same color. They are both very practical dresses and the tricotine will be found equal to taking the place of a suit skirt and blouse, or separate skirt and blouse, for all day wear. It is the sort of dress that becomes useful for the street or business, worn with a fur piece or separate coat.

The taffeta dress is one of several popular models in which narrow flounces of the silk play an important part. In some of these the skirt is a series of overlapping flounces, of scant fullness, and each about five inches wide. They are set to a foundation and terminate just below the hip line. Above this the plain taffeta is gathered into the belt at the waistline. Bodices in the several models vary, some of them having no flounces in their finishing, and a favorite for them is the surplice style. In the dress shown above the skirt is draped at the sides and a group of three flounces set on diagonally suggests a tunic high at one side. Above this group a second flounce follows the same diagonal line. The tail for the girles of heavy, Roman-striped ribbon is an advantage that the designer of this frock did not overlook. It is the best possible finishing touch and besides ensuring the waist it follows the line of the flounces and makes a chic affair of a simple dress. In this model flounces appear on the sleeves and at the neck.

The frock of tricotine has an attractive and simple bodice that fastens along the shoulder and underarm at one side. It is cut with a round neck rather high and a pattern in stitched-on braid that has the appearance of embroidery, outlines a pointed collar. The bodice extends a little below the waistline, where the skirt is set on in a way that widens the hips a little. A narrow band of the embroidery ornaments the front of the bodice and a similar band, but wider, is placed about the skirt. Small, flat, close-covered buttons extend in a close-set row below this band to the bottom of the skirt. The soft girle at the waist is made of tricotine and the long sleeves flare a little and are finished with a narrow band of embroidery in the same pattern as the other bands. This little flare in the sleeves, the very slightly widened hips, the easy adjustment of the bodice, are all new style notes that the designer has adapted, with becoming restraint, to a wool frock that is intended to be practical.

Value of Quick Decision.

As a rule the man who has trained himself to quick decisions and prompt actions follows close to the right. He does not need to debate questions as does the man who has become a master of deliberation. His mental faculties seem to work automatically and they are generally right. I'm not sure but that they are more often right than they are with the man who is constantly weighing pros and cons and becoming confused with the issues. He saves time because he acts quickly and he saves everybody the uncertainty of indecision.

Flowers.

Flowers are perhaps the most effective of the many little "finishing touches" necessary to an attractive home. There are thousands of persons with beautiful houses, costly furnishings, perhaps, artistically and skillfully arranged by the hands of a clever decorator, but it takes the little finishing touches, the seemingly unimportant tiny things, done by the woman who loves and exists for her home and expresses her soul in her surroundings to make the house lovable.—Exchange.

New Telephone Table.

An inventor has invented a compact telephone table which can be folded to even smaller dimensions for moving from room to room.

Why the Weather Bureau?

This question is likely to be asked, in more or less querulous tones, whenever the local weather prediction fails, as it often does, says the Popular Science Monthly. The bureau overlooks the fact that the weather bureau has much more important things to forecast than ordinary changes of weather. It predicts with certainty great windstorms, destructive floods, severe frosts and other atmospheric visitations that endanger life and property on a large scale and collects climatic statistics for scientific agriculture.

Importance of "Now."

"Now" is ever ticking from the clock of time. "Now" is the watchword of the wise. "Now" is on the banner of the prudent. Let us keep this little word always in our mind, and whenever anything presents itself to us in the shape of work, whether mental or physical, let us do it with all our might, remembering that now is the only time for us.—Selected.

After Thirty-Four Years.

A Bath man has just received dividend checks from some shares of a silver mine which he bought 34 years ago and had forgotten all about. A friend who remembered the purchase told him of a notice in some paper that the mine was about to pay its first dividend and he began to cut coupons.—Grit.

Hunting Eye Goes to School

BY J. H. MILLER

The school bell was ringing as Hunting Eye came in. Several children were running into the school house. Hunting Eye followed them and sat down in the back of the room. At first, all the pupils and the teacher looked at him curiously. Soon, however, their strangeness wore off and, presently, one offered him a book and another, a pencil and, before long, they were quite friendly.

When recess came, they all gathered round the boy from the North Woods and asked him all manner of questions. When their questioning died down a bit, the Indian boy began to ask a few himself.

"What is this?" said he.

"A school."

"Yes, a school where you learn reading and writing and geography and such things."

"Who runs it?" asked Hunting Eye.

"Here comes Teacher, ask her." "The state government runs the schools," said the teacher. "Long ago, the government did not think the schools important enough to take up its time in running them. So they were carried on by private persons and anyone who wanted to go to school had to pay for that privilege. Soon, however, the men who were running the government saw that one of the most important things they could do would be to provide an education for all the boys and girls of the state. So they established free schools for every one."

"Does the state run this school?" "Yes, through the township. You see, in most states, each township is divided into school districts with one school in each district. In the city, the districts often cover the same area as the wards. All the districts in the township are grouped under one head. The township boards are under the County Superintendent. The State Superintendent is over all the schools in the state. In the city, the schools are all under the City Superintendent who is usually directly under the State Superintendent. The head of the schools is generally chosen by the School Board, the members of which are, in most cases, elected by the people. The Board also chooses the teachers and carries on a good deal of the business of the schools."

"The Federal Government has a Bureau of Education which studies school problems and aids the state schools in many ways."

Whales That Walked.

Whales used to walk. That is the statement of Prof. Arey Thompson, authority on fishes of the sea, in a lecture on that subject at the Royal Institution, London. He said the whale originally had four feet or fins, but that the two hind ones had simply devolved away. In bygone ages ancestors of the present family of whales walked about much as seals do.

Apt Reminders.

"Come upstairs and let me wash your hands," said Winnie's mother. "I don't want to go up!" walked Winnie, aged three. "Let her wash them down here," called grandmother. "She can do it just as well." "No," her mother said firmly. "I want her to come up with me!" Winnie came upstairs as slowly as possible. "Oh," she said, turning a wrathfully fearful face to her mother, "why don't you obey your mother?"

Woodcraft For Boy and Girl Scouts

BY ANGELA ELLE BEARD

Trailing

Trailing is something like the game of hide and seek, only vastly more exciting, for, instead of scraps of paper to follow, you have the tracks of wild creatures. And when you discover the tracks tell a story and that you and the story, you immediately and automatically decide that trailing out is a more game and that of all the interesting parts of woodcraft, it is the most interesting.

In trailing to read the strange tales that nature really become a detective of the wild, and the more practice you have the longer the stories grow, because there are a number of things about tracks that you do not see in the beginning. At first, you have to give your mind to identifying and following the tracks, but later you will notice whether they are fresh or old, whether the animal was running fast or traveling as it would go. If going at full speed, it will probably be tracks of a wild cat, dog, or deer. In that case, you will generally find at the end signs of a camp which did not end by a hunt or a killed animal.

To track a deer to follow the trail of the deer is followed with snow, but even in the footprints clearly, but not all the time and so will not be a deer. You can sometimes find tracks that are almost as clear as the road. Even over a rough, hilly country may be a track in a short time where you can find tracks of some kind of wild animal. They may be expert tracks that lead into close clusters which show the deep impressions of long hind legs, a deer's narrow tracks, or the deep impressions of the hooves of a horse. Tracks of the squirrel are also common. Tracks of a deer track resembles that of a cat but is very much smaller. A cat track is like a deer's with often the imprint of hairs between the toes, sharp and spoked, whereas a squirrel's, only the squirrel's are a good deal larger.

The Windward Islands.

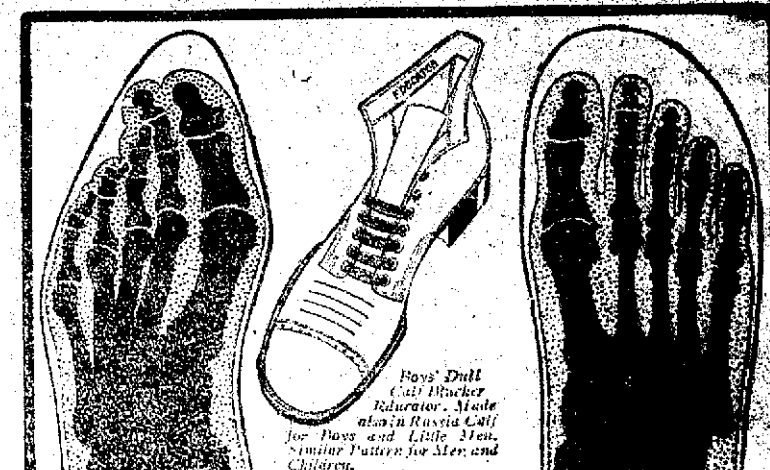

The Windward Islands belong to Great Britain. They consist of the islands of St. Lucia, St. Vincent and Grenada, with the smaller islands of the Grenadine chain. The islands, formerly three distinct colonies united under a governor-in-chief, who resides at St. George's, Grenada, the Windward Islands derive their name from their position, as they also the Leeward Islands to the east, being more exposed to the trade winds than the neighboring Leeward Islands.

Thunder and Lightning.

Thunder is caused by electric discharge of lightning. This discharge, in forcing its way through the atmosphere, heats the air and vaporizing in its path to a high temperature, causing a violent expansion along the whole length of the flash. The result is a deep compression wave, or what is the same, a noise. Lightning is the flash of the electric explosion.

Inflamed Eyes.

Nothing brings surer relief to inflamed eyes than a wash with boracic acid water. And one thing that its user must remember is to have the preparation free from any foreign particles, however minute, or they will cause irritation. The boracic acid should be thoroughly dissolved in water that has been boiled and cooled.

Coal's Uncertain History.

The story of coal is a very uncertain one. No one seems to know when it first began to be used for fuel. Ladies' Bazaar

Two Lonely Souls

By ALDEN CHAPMAN

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union)

A lovely pink rose described a chela in the air over the fence surrounding the grounds of a large rambling old fashioned house and landed directly against the breast of Bruno Paxton. He clutched it as it was headed for the ground, glanced up and met the flashing eyes and smiling face of a lady half concealed by the shrubbery. Then the latter darted away pursued by a little girl who her apron full of flowers, pelted her out of view with the fragrant flowers.

Somewhere the mind of Bruno was set in a turmoil. Had the lady in the floral battle aimed at her child opponent or at himself? At all events the episode set his mind in a whirl. He had reached thirty the same impossible idealist that he had been at twenty. He treasured the rose and dreamed dreams. He passed the same place slowly the next day. Half obscured by some lilies was a feminine form. Bruno slightly raised his hat. Unmistakably in response there was the flutter of a handkerchief. He was noticed. It must be the lady of the rose battle. A vast ferment of sentiment and romanticism took place in his soul. The next morning it was raining but from an upper window in the house a white hand moved as if in notice of greeting.

Passing down the street the next day with his close friend Dale Armstrong Bruno clutched his hat feverishly and indicating a lady crossing from the house now his center of attraction to an automobile, and whose face was that of the lady of the roses he uttered tumultuously.

Armstrong you know everybody in town. Who is that girl?

Gilly repeated Dale. She is a married woman—Mrs. Walter Martin. Husband and child. What's your interest?

Nothing. He flattered in a sort of a collapsing growth. Love blasted my ideal vanished. Only a flirt! he told himself in a suppressed outburst. It was the rude blighting of a possible romance in his budding that so crushed Bruno. He had woven a fairy fabric of idealism and it was humiliating depressing disappointing to have it thus sent scuttling. Armstrong coming in to his office the next day found him seated morose and hollow eyed at the window, staring out blankly at nothingness.

What's the trouble Bruno? he had in his cheery off hand way.

Oh tired of life and its false promises. Returned the other dismally. I don't seem to reach any goal in my experiences. Tell you I'm almost suicidal in my present mood.

That sort of talk is out of place. Will ever in my office I've got a real glittering silver a fine and honest deadly revolver and a bottle of sulphuric acid. Want to make a choice?

Thank you no. answered Bruno. I really noticed at the badinage good natured as it was. If I ever stop off abruptly the water route is the best and cheapest.

There seemed to be a satisfaction in musing his dark ideas. Bruno did not cheat himself by trying to believe that he had been innocently attracted by the lady of the roses. His verge of romance had been attracted by her but he had only glimpsed its outlines when fate had abruptly transformed it into a dreary desert.

Oh for one true sympathetic soul! he pondered as he left his home his way homeward.

It was winter and he took off his coat. He was to sleep and rest and began pulling up and down. He got directly up to the edge of the emerald blanket overlooking the stream.

A splash of water not so cruel as a harsh disappointing world. he uttered in indignantly.

No—no—surely you are not thinking of—

Bruno started. A slender woman came Bruno had never seen her. He did not know that it was she who had thrown the blue slip in his path and had followed him. She was fair of face and of form although as far up in the twenties as himself but there was a gentle sympathy in her eyes that somehow won upon him.

If you mean I was going to jump in he said no I'd ought to think of—

Thank of your friends?

I have none. Nobody cares for me.

And you never noticed the blue slip? reproachfully censured this sentimental spinster after bowing to me in the garden and responding with a smile to my waving from the window?

Oh it was you? exclaimed Bruno. I haven't embodied in my sister Mrs. Martin continued Miss Belle Weston. But it has been very pleasant to think I was making a manly sympathy here. A faint smile.

She hung her head now. Bruno took another look at her understanding her error as to the roses. He pulled her enthusiasm. He appreciated her interest in himself.

We seem to be two lonely ones. he said. We come together in a queer way don't we? Well maybe it is fate.

You wouldn't ever think again of that horrid river and all that would you? pleaded Belle.

As long as you care about it," responded Bruno tenderly.

THE CLEARFIELD PROGRESS, CLEARFIELD, PA. FRIDAY EVENING JANUARY 2, 1920

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Adventure and rock-ledge, rather than criminal, and excited by liquor, Curly, Phyllis and Mac, both practically here boys, become involved in a horse-stealing adventure. Disposing of the stolen stock in the town of Esopus, N.Y., the band separates. Curly and his partner staying in town. They are awakened and told a posse is in town in pursuit of them. They elude their pursuers. Overland next day, Mac is killed by the posse and Curly, made captive, after he has shot one and himself been wounded. The man shot is Luck Cullison.

CHAPTER II.—Cullison's friends, all gentlemen, determine to track Curly as an example to cattle thieves. With the rope around his neck he is saved by the intervention of Kate Cullison, Luck's daughter.

CHAPTER III.—The wound dressed, and further violence not apprehended, Curly is sent for by Cullison. He questions the boy concerning a notorious outlaw, Sonny Stone, real leader of the rustlers who had been Curly's partner. Esopus leaves the Sonny Stone is Curly's bitter enemy and exercises a baleful influence over the ex-sheriff's son. Curly, who has quarreled with his father, Cullison goes back for Curly.

CHAPTER IV.

A Bear Trap.

The winding trail led up to the scrub pines and from there north into the hills. Curly had not traveled far when he heard the sound of a gun fired three times in quick succession. He stopped to listen. Presently there came a faint call for help.

Curly, cantered around the shoulder of the hill and saw a man squinting on the ground. He was stooped forward in an awkward fashion with his back to Phyllis.

"What's up?"

At the question the man looked over his shoulder. Pale and helpless rage burned in the deepest black eyes.

"Nothing at all. Don't you see I'm just taking a nap?" he answered quietly.

Curly recognized him now. The man was Sonny Stone. Little beads of perspiration stood out all over his forehead. A glance showed the reason. One of his hands was caught in a bear trap fastened to a cutwood. His jaws held him so that he could not move.

The young man swung from the back of Keno. He found the limb of a cottonwood about as thick as his forearm below the elbow. This he set close to the trap.

"Soon as I get the lip open shove her in," he told Stone.

The rescuer slipped the toes of his boots over the lower lip and caught don't up and Laura sent him at once for the doctor. She led the way into the house and swiftly gathered bandages, a sponge and a basin of water. Together she and Curly bathed and wrapped the wound.

"What's Up?"

Laura was as gentle as she could be. "I know I'm hurting you," she said, her fingers trembling.

"Not a bit of it. Great pleasure to have you for a nurse. I'm certainly in luck." Curly did not understand the bitterness in the sardonic face and he resented it.

That something was wrong between them Curly could see. Sonny was very polite in spite of his bitterness, but his hard eyes watched her as a cat does a mouse. Moreover, the girl was afraid of him. He could tell that by the timid startled way she had of answering. Now, why need she fear the man? It would be as much as his life was worth to lift a hand to hurt her.

After the doctor had come and had attended to the crushed wrist Curly stepped out to the porch to find Laura. "I'm right sorry for what I said. Miss Laura. There is a white a fellow makes a mistake. It's as big a blunder as I can make to happen a little often. But I'm not really one of those smart guys."

Out came her gloved hand in the first of grips.

"I know that now. You didn't think I made a mistake. I thought you were taking advantage because I had been friendly. I'm glad you spoke about it. Well, forget it. There's something I want you to do for me."

"I expect maybe I'll do it."

"It's about that boy he has of there."

"She gave a hopeless little gesture toward the hills."

"Sam Cullison?"

"Yes."

"What about him?"

"He's bent on ruining him, always has been ever since he got a hold on him. I can't tell you how I know it but I'm sure. And now he's more set on it than ever."

"Jealous is he?"

"Yes."

PROHIBITION WILL BEGIN AT TWELVE A. M. JANUARY 17

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—January 17, instead of January 16, will be the birthday of constitutional prohibition the Collector of Internal Revenue has decided. Enforcement of constitutional prohibition will start at 12:01 a. m. January 17, Commissioner Roper said. The constitutional amendment was to become effective exactly one year after the thirty-sixth state ratified it but no one seems to know at what hour on January 16, 1919 the thirty-sixth state acted. Under these conditions if the war time ban would be lifted or peace proclaimed it would give a few hours more in which to reduce the large amount of liquor in the country.

Parents Were Almost Hopeless, But He Is Now Well and Strong.

"Our little boy's health was so poor we were afraid we were going to lose him. He is 10 years old, and has had weak lungs ever since he was eight months old, caused by pneumonia. We have been very careful with him and doctor him continually, but we had almost despaired of ever having a strong, well boy."

But since giving him Mils Emulsion, all his trouble is gone, and he is in perfect health."—Mrs. G. W. Smiley, 20 Maple St., Dayton, O.

Out They Go!

Silly city ward-healers like to kid themselves about "delivering the farmer vote." In Ontario they had notions like that last fall—and the farmers took the bit in their teeth, kicked the politicians out and elected a farmer government. Now, at the beginning of an election year, is a good time for our own politicians to take a leaf out of the Canadian notebook, says

The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN

For the farmers of America are united in thought and action as never before.

Consider the National Farm Bureau Federation—no politician can lead those men by the nose! Pulling together, they have determined, in effect, that the farmer shall no longer be the national goat. Acting together, they can prove that the farmer is not a profiteer and they can have about anything they want. Every farmer should know what the united farmers are doing these days. Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

To look one's best and feel one's best, eat a hearty breakfast, then take a hot shower. This is the secret of a clear complexion. The pores of the skin are opened by the hot water, and the impurities which are then squeezed into the pores are eliminated. The skin is then left clear and fresh. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store, but it is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses the body, so hot water and limestone phosphate cleanses the skin. We must always consider that internal sanitation is very important. The skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowels do. Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should just try this for a week and notice results.

A Satisfied Man

By ALVAN JORDAN GARTH

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

"Those were the days, Burt; you know it and I know it, don't we?"

"Yes," nodded Raleigh Burt, just starting out for a two weeks' vacation hunt, to his close friend, Walter Marston, just returned from one. "I fancy we didn't appreciate the old town during the happiest period of our lives."

"Wish we'd stayed there," declared Marston. "You got restless, and ambitions, and broke away from the only place that will ever seem like real home to us. The city lured us. Well, we've had twenty years of it. I am still the slave of a soulless corporation at three thousand dollars a year. You are doing a little better, but who knows what luck might have struck us if we had stayed where we were brought up?"

"I haven't even heard from Rockton for nearly ten years," said Burt. "Did you stop there?"

"I didn't. I met old Ezra Perkins on the train. He gave me all the news. You know it was old Ezra who took your job at the general store. Well, it seems he studied law, got admitted to the bar, was elected judge, and according to Ezra, just rules the town—literally, position, a sort of king about the district. Then there's Mort Sawyer."

"Still in Rockton, is he?"

"Largely, consequently; you know he superseded me in my drug store position. Started in at four dollars a week. His old boss died rich and Sawyer married his daughter, Nance. Why come to think of it, she was your only dame, wasn't she?"

"A pretty girl and a smart one," replied Burt, his eyes showing the glamour of memory.

"Well, she is now the richest woman in the county. Just think of the luck Sawyer fell into!"

"I have half a mind to put in my fourteen days at the old burg," remarked Burt thoughtfully.

Somehow Marston's reports of the success in life of Reeves and Sawyer made Burt thoughtful. Not that he was envious, but it appeared to him that fate had not been very kind to either himself or Marston, and yet they certainly had started out in life with better educations and business ability than those successful rivals in the race for success. Burt was not disloyal in the slightest degree when he recalled the bright, sprightly Nance, Porter of his boyhood days, but he felt disappointed as he realized that his childhood wife had been obliged to do without all the luxury and ease that of course the inherited wealth of the rich brought to his daughter. As to Reeves, too, he felt a twinge of restlessness, for he had not himself blocked out a legal career, but circumstances had drifted him into another line.

"Yes, I'll take in Rockton," decided Burt, and he did. About the only person who remembered and recognized him when he reached the town was antiquated, gossiping old Doc Kendall, the proprietor of the one pioneer hotel of the place, which Burt found was just as musty and dilapidated as in his boyhood days. Rockton itself, if anything, was more dead than of yore. It seemed to be asleep half the time.

Doc Kendall got Burt in a corner and began to pump him as to his history since he had left Rockton twenty years previous. The old gossip lived on curiosity and talk and entered with zest into Burt's affairs.

"Five thousand a year, a steady job, four children and a happy wife, eh?" he commented. "Well, I call that top notch, Burt."

"You do?" observed Burt.

"I should say so! Why, look at the old crowd you once knew around here. Vegetarians, nearly all of 'em. Just took what came along and dream away their life and stick in the native mud."

"Why, I hear that old Reeves has reached the highest pinnacle of the ladder of fame."

"Ho! ho!" snorted Kendall, scoffing. "All front and frazzle. What's a district judge in Macon county, anyhow? Gih is what he always was, a great big balloon—all josh and brag. Say, I'll wager he has his home mortgaged up to the limit and yet he struts about as if he owned the town."

"And Mort Sawyer?"

"Oh, poor old Mort! Quick! There he goes with his wife. Why, you must remember Nance? They are here, remember Nance? The indication of Kendall's finger Burt saw a weasened old man and a wry-faced, faded woman, driving along in a dilapidated gig with a feeble, wobbling crowd held up by the patched and splintered shafts.

"Say, Burt," continued Kendall in a confidential tone, "they say Nance has got so stingy she lives on potato parings. She allows Gih a dollar a week for his tobacco and laundry and about all but mauls him if he breaks over the three. Five thousand dollars a year, and he's a pauper and a miser, looking and bringing up your family with all the advantages of anxiety and education. Why, boy, you're living on the cream of life!"

And, his illusions dispelled, Raleigh Burt went back home and kissed his wife's cheek with an ardor that brought back all the freshness of youth, and looked over his little brood with new love and pride, himself a satisfied man.

"Yes. If he can drag Sam down and get him into trouble he'll pay two grudges at once. And he will. You'll see. He's wily as a snake. For that matter there is Apache blood in him, folks say."

"What about young Callison? Can't he make a fight for himself?"

"Oh, you know how boys are. He is completely under this man's influence." Her voice broke a little. "And I can't help him. I'm only a girl. I won't listen to me. What Sam needs is a man friend, one just as strong and determined as Soapy but one who is good and the right sort of a man."

"Are you picking me for that responsible friend who is to be a powerful influence for good?" Carly asked with a smile.

"Yes—yes, I am." She looked up at him confidently.

Curly met her on the ground of her own seriousness. "I'll tell you something, Miss Laura. Maybe you're glad to know that the reason for going to the horse ranch is to help Callison if I can."

He went on to tell her the story of what the Callisons had done for him. In all that he said there was not one word to suggest such a thing as Laura London's mind jumping the gaps to a knowledge of the truth that Carly himself did not have. The young man was in love with Kate Callison. She was sure of it.

When Carly walked back into the house, Stone laid down the paper he had been reading.

"I see the Sentinel hints that Carly Flandrau had better be lynched," he jeered.

"The Sentinel don't always hit the bull's-eye, Soapy," returned the young man evenly. "It thinks I belong to the Soapy Stone outfit, but we know I haven't that honor."

Soapy frowned at him under the heavy eyebrows that gave him so menacing an effect.

"Better come back with me to the ranch till you look around."

"Suits me right down to the ground if it does you."

Some one came whistling into the house and opened the door of the room. He was a big lank fellow with a shotgun in his hands. "From the south" was stamped all over his awkward frame. He stood staring at the unexpected guests. His eyes, shining with those of Stone, grew chill and hard.

"So you're back here again, are you?" he asked, looking pretty black. Stone's lips smile mocked him. "I don't know how you guessed it, but I sure am here."

"Didn't I tell you to keep away from the Bar 99—you and your whole circus outfit?"

"Seems to me you did mention something of that sort. But how was I to know whether you meant it unless I came back to see?"

Laura came into the room and ranged herself beside her father. Her hand rested lightly on his forearm.

"He got caught in one of your bear traps and this young man brought him here to wait for the doctor," she explained.

"Hmp!"

The Missourian stared without civility at his guest, turned on his heel, and with his daughter beside him marched out of the room. He could not decently tell Stone to leave while he was under the care of a doctor, but he did not intend to make him welcome.

"We'll pull our freight right away, Carly," Stone announced as soon as his host had gone.

The young man went to the stable and saddled Keno. While he was tightening the cinch a shadow fell across his shoulder. He did not need to look round to see whose it was.

"I'm so glad you're going to the horse ranch. You will look out for Sam. I don't know why, but I have the greatest confidence in you," the owner of the shadow explained sweetly.

Curly smiled blandly over his shoulder at her. "That's a good thing, Miss Laura. I'll be sure to do for you."

She blushed and laughed at the same time. Her hand came from behind her back. In it was a letter.

"That's to be my pay for giving Master Sam his billy dog, is it?"

"How did you guess? It is a letter to Sam."

"How did I guess it? Guess I'm sure a wiz, don't I?"

She saw her father coming and handed him the letter quickly.

"Here. Take it." A spark of mischief lit her eye and the dimples came out on her cheeks. "Good-by, Carly."

TRUE LOVE WINS OVER OBSTACLES IN STATE LAWS

Pretty English Miss Comes To This Country To Wed Brady Township Yank

COURT SMOOTHS THE PATH

"Love will find a way," time, space, legal formalities and other unforeseen and ever-present obstacles to the contrary notwithstanding. This fact was demonstrated at the Court House Wednesday. It is a long, though happy, story shipmates, and will take some time in the telling, but as "everybody loves a lover" and also loves to hear, see or read of true love surmounting all obstacles, we are going to give it to you, secure in the belief that you will follow us on the we are perforce required to go more than three thousand miles afield to gather the threads from which this story is woven.

But here goes, at the beginning. On December 15, 1917, Jesse Johnson, a Brady township boy, enlisted in Uncle Sam's air service as a private away out in Portland, Oregon. After seven months in training at an aviation camp Private Johnson was sent overseas on July 15, 1918, and after dodging German subs in due course of time arrived in London. He was sent to an English training camp and while fitting himself for a go with the Hun found time to make the acquaintance of a pretty little English girl named Elsie Cathrall.

Johnson had the real American spirit or pep and straightly plunged heels over head into love for the fair ally. The feeling was reciprocated and matters were getting quite serious when along came the signing of the armistice with peace for and with everybody but Senator Lodge. Coincident therewith Johnson's outfit was ordered out of England forthwith.

The recall order played havoc with the plans of the lovers, but Mars triumphed at this stage of the game and the soldier was forced to bid his innamorata a tearful farewell and accompany his outfit back to God's country. He arrived in this country December 4, 1918, and was promptly mustered out of the service.

The lovers promised to be true to each other even though cruel fate in the shape of your Uncle Samuel placed more than three thousand miles of stormy ocean between them. With them it was not a case of "out of sight out of mind," but absence made each heart grow fonder, if such thing were possible under the circumstances.

During the past twelve months many tender missives from Luthersburg and London passed each other en route and the upshot of the correspondence resulted in Miss Cathrall leaving her English home and setting sail for the land of the free and the home of her brave.

This morning the happy young people presented themselves at the office of Register and Recorder Chase and asked for a marriage license. Deputy Recorder George W. Gulich got busy at once and started to issue the desired permit. The groom-to-be answered the required questions without a hitch and the blushing bride was equally as prompt with her answers until the age question was reached. When asked how old she was Miss Cathrall demurely replied, "Nineteen." The genial deputy then asked if she had the consent of her parents to the marriage and when given a negative answer, politely informed the young couple that their consent in writing would have to be secured or there would be no wedding.

Can you imagine the situation. After traveling three thousand miles across a storm-tossed ocean to wed the man of your choice only to find that a stern old Pennsylvania law interposed an almost insurmountable barrier.

"Consternation reigned" with the young people until the genial deputy came to the assistance of Dan Gulich by suggesting an appeal to Judge Bell. The Judge was located by telephone at his residence and when acquainted with the circumstances said no Pennsylvania statute should be allowed to stand in the way of any young lady who came that far to wed a Clearfield county boy and thus become a real American citizen. He told Deputy Gulich that he would appoint him Miss Cathrall's guardian, which would empower him to give his consent to the marriage of his ward and all would be well, he hoped.

Wearing smiles that simply couldn't be chased away, the again happy youngsters beat it back to the Recorder's office and soon the coveted permit was in their hands. After

STEWART'S DRUG STORE

Wyoming county, February 21, 1847. He came to Covington township when he was sixteen years of age and all the rest of her life was spent in Covington and Karthaus townships.

He was united in marriage with Mary Reiter fifty years ago. They were a most devoted couple and their home life was beautiful in character. Mr. Evans was a great lover of young people and of music and their home was the gathering place for all the young people of the community.

He was a most devoted father and a very kind neighbor. He was beloved in the community because he followed in the footsteps of his Master who went about doing good.

He was actively engaged in lumbering and farming for many years. He was a good business man and possessed the strictest integrity.

He lived a faithful member of the Oak Hill Lutheran church and was active in all departments of church work as long as he was able. He was an Elder in the church, served two years as Sunday school superintendent and was for many years the Bible Class teacher.

He is survived by his wife and three children, Harry Evans, Wilcox, Pa., Frank Evans, Pottersburg and Mrs. Wilbur Carr, Pottersburg.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock from the Oak Hill Lutheran Church. Interment at Oak Hill.

True Poetry.

True poetry, like true eloquence, is the voice of nature, appealing to the heart with its utmost subtlety and power. . . . Instead of teaching merely, it persuades, elevates, inspires. It excites a feeling where the other leaves an opinion or a maxim. It proposes examples of ideal excellence, and raises virtue into heroism.—Hugh Swinburn Legard.

Measuring Rainfall.

The quantity of rain which falls is measured by rain-gauges or pluviometers, which are variously constructed. One of the best is that known as Symon's rain-gauge, consisting of a funnel-shaped revolving vessel to catch the rain, and a glass measure of small diameter to measure it. To simplify calculation, the internal area of the measure is usually one-tenth that of the mouth of the funnel.

Smart Clothes

To the casual observer, clothes are just clothes—mostly all alike. Yet there is an important difference between the general run of ready-to-wear clothes and Stein-Bloch clothes.

You can readily see the pattern and the style in any suit. But the wearing quality—the serviceability—of clothes depends largely upon the unseen things—the linings, the needlework, the tailoring. These unseen things you take on faith.

Yet not entirely on faith, because the Stein-Bloch label, which stands for Sixty-Three Years of Knowing How is a pledge of quality in itself. And our label endorses it.

You begin to fully appreciate STEIN-BLOCH SMART CLOTHES only after such service as would have put ordinary clothes into the discard. It is this inherent quality of continued smartness—smartness as long as the woollens hold together—that makes Stein-Bloch the choice of men who know.

CHICAGO AROUSED OVER PUBLIC HANGING SHOW

JAILOR AND SHERIFF PERMITTED TWO HUNDRED PRISONERS TO BE WITNESSES OF EXECUTION

OTHER INDISCRETIONS CHARGED

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—Two hundred prisoners in the Cook county jail today witnessed the hanging of Raffalo Buraque. The men stood in their cells with windows facing the court and saw Buraque go to his death as a moral lesson.

The jailor W. T. Davies, and Sheriff C. W. Peters arranged for the prisoners to see the hanging despite protests from Chicago club women, society leaders and Governor Lowden. The prisoners stood in windows and watched the traps sprung. A few turned away but the majority gazed without flinching. Buraque was convicted of murdering his wife.

At all former hangings the prisoners were removed from their cells facing the court where the hanging took place.

The hanging took place an hour earlier than the time set to prevent a possible court action allowing a stay of execution. All telephones in the jail were disconnected. This action, Davies explained, was taken as the result of a stay of execution being granted as the death warrant was being read in a recent hanging here.

COUNT OF PEOPLE, WEALTH AND OF INDUSTRIES BEGINS IN U. S. TODAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Taking the fourteenth census officially began today in every part of the United States. Ninety thousand enumerators were ready to start to work. The census will show how many million people there are in the United States as well as the total monetary value of farms, mines and manufactures. It will also show how much of the country's acreage is used for farming and how many persons are employed in industries.

HIGH SCHOOLS FORM BASKET BALL LEAGUE

Excellent Schedule Arranged For Season Which opens on Tomorrow Evening

LOCALS HAVE WINNING FIVE

In order to stimulate the spirit of friendly rivalry and also to give an added interest to their winter schedule, six High schools in this section have formed a basket ball league among themselves. This new association is called the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League, and the members are: Clearfield, DuBois, Reynoldsville, Punxsutawney, Brookville and New Bethlehem.

All of these schools have been prominent in the basket ball world for several years and the end of the season has invariably found several of them claiming the High school championship for this section. With a desire to see just where this title does belong, the athletic associations in the six schools named above got together and arranged a schedule of basket ball games whereby each team will play two games with each of the other teams, making ten games for each school. The schools in the W. P. I. A. L. are the strongest in this section of the state and the team carrying off the flag will have a just claim to the name of champion.

Where C. H. S. Stands
Clearfield High's schedule is as follows:

Jan. 9—DuBois at home.
Jan. 16—Reynoldsville, away.
Jan. 23—Punxsutawney, away.
Jan. 30—Brookville, at home.
Feb. 6—DuBois, away.
Feb. 13—DuBois, at home.
Feb. 20—Reynoldsville, at home.
Feb. 27—Punxsutawney, at home.
Mar. 5—Brookville, away.
Mar. 12—New Bethlehem, away.
C. H. S. has had as strong a claim to the championship as any other school in the past and the way this year's five are working out indicates that she will not be out of the race this season.

As a pre-league game Clearfield will play Altoona Saturday evening, January 3. Altoona plays DuBois to night and since DuBois is to be Clearfield's first opponent in the league, tomorrow's game will give a slight indication of the chance C. H. S. has of beginning her League schedule with a victory. We're going to wallop Altoona tomorrow and at the same time get ready to do the same thing to the third class city team when we meet them.

lars remaining on the team Coach Heisey has, nevertheless, picked a fast team from last season's subs, which has done good work in winning two games; one from Phillipsburg and the second from a team of ex-High stars. Butler, the team's war-horse, is playing his usual brilliant game at forward and has support of an equally high grade from Kurtz at the other forward stand. The center position in the two games already played was covered by Neff, who promises to equal any former pivot man on the floor and surpasses many others when it comes to putting the free ones thru the net. Martin and Norris as guards accounted for the small score allotted to the two opponent teams already defeated and their speed and clear floor work put them at the head of the class.

These are the five men who will undoubtedly represent C. H. S. regularly, but back of them is a squad of subs who are no mean players and who give the regular team a good practice every evening. Many of the subs rank but slightly below varsity men and will no doubt appear on the team many times during the season.

With the program and possibilities outlined above C. H. S. hopes to have a very successful basket ball season, and altho we are cognizant of our weak places we hope to hoist over the W. P. I. A. L. a red flag bearing a bit of black—not for bolshevism, but to show that C. H. S. came out on top.

FARMERS TAKING MORE INTEREST IN RAISING OF SWINE

Plans for a better hog campaign in Pennsylvania for 1920 have been announced by the animal husbandry extension service of the Pennsylvania State College. The program is designed to benefit the swine industry in this state. Community breeders' associations is the first step toward increasing the efficiency of pork production, is the belief of livestock specialists in the extension service. Next year's program calls for new breeders' organizations in counties where such do not exist, furthering interest in communities already organized, and carrying out pasture demonstrations in counties adapted to hog raising. A county automobile tour taking in the principal breeders' farms, an annual show and sale, and the introduction of pure-bred sires and females of merit will be a part of the activities, dealing with breeders' organizations.

The second part of next year's program will be hog pasture demonstrations. New demonstrations will be conducted in counties that were not covered last year. Further assistance and information about hog pasture will be furnished in counties where demonstrations were held during the past summer. In many cases it is deemed advisable to repeat demonstration, giving them the closest supervision and attracting the interest of the farmers of the community so they will watch carefully to learn what methods of feeding are best suited to their own particular conditions. Hogging down corn is not commonly practiced in the East, but this is often the cheapest way to fatten pigs. In addition to finding out the value of forage crops and the way to handle them, the farmer also learns the advantages of keeping account of his farm operations.

MEXICO WILL CHARGE WITH WRONGFUL ACTS

HOPE TO PRESENT COUNTER AND PUT THIS GOVERNMENT ON DEFENSIVE IN ITS DEALINGS

MURDERS OF MEXICANS ARE CHARGED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Mexico has protested to the United States against the alleged mistreatment of her citizens in this country according to an unofficial advice from Mexico City. While formal comment was withheld for the time being, it was learned that officials believe this new Mexican move is launched with the expectation of prolonging diplomatic negotiations and if possible put this government on the defensive. The note alleges that a Mexican section hand was killed in Texas last month and that a Mexican family of three were murdered on a ranch near Jarrel, Texas. Mexico is expected to make a charge that Texas is in a state of lawlessness but under control of the federal government which is trying to get revenge for Secretary Lansing's charge that large areas of Mexico are at the mercy of the bandits.

RIGHTO!

The Rafiman's Journal in commenting on the national delegate election to be held this year makes some very pertinent comments which, if one did not see the heading on the paper, might believe was from the editorial column of what is popularly termed an independent newspaper. We quote:

"We do not believe in 'set ups' nor do we believe in combinations in restraint of office seeking a bit more than in restraint of trade, declared illegal by the government."

Thus we have the inference that there has been a "set up." Be that as it is, the Journal goes on to say that Centre and Clearfield counties should send the delegates to Chicago which argument is based on what the editor call the "the equity of the case." While putting forth the claim of Centre and Clearfield County there is no word of cheer or endorsement for H. B. Scott of Centre who has already announced but in the following words the possibility of Leslie Stewart throwing his hat in the ring is heartily endorsed:

"The name of Leslie Stewart has been mentioned by a great many persons and he would measure up to all the requirements of a National delegate at this time. He is a Republican because a good man cannot be anything else, he is right on the many public questions now agitating the country and any man that isn't right should not ask for political preferment, when such preferment has to do with the people and the industries of the country."

Frenchman Must Pay More Attention to Physical Development in War

By Prof. Robert Emmett Monroe

I am going back to France to help the French in the devastated regions, and this is why: The French, with whom I have practically lived for six months, have repeatedly told me that they expect another war. They believe that they will be oppressed again by the same enemy. They feel that they must fit themselves for such an emergency. How? Well, they have said to me, these French soldiers: "You Americans were the better fighters—we were the better soldiers. You were the better fighters because you Americans were more physically fit. And you Americans have taught us Frenchmen that we must pay more attention to physical development."

They are in need of our sympathy. Sometimes I find that our own Americans do not understand them fully until they are taught to realize the depth of their sacrifice. The Frenchman does not flout it. In fact, he belittles his troubles and his achievements. He says: "It does one good to make fun of oneself."

GOOD ARRANGEMENT OF ROADWAYS ON ANY FARM WILL SAVE BOTH TIME AND LABOR

The Diagram Given Herewith Shows a Good Arrangement of Drives and Lanes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Good-road building, like charity, should begin at home. This is another way of stating that private roads on the farm are as important to the interests they serve as the public roads over which the farmer's product is hauled to market.

In proportion to its use a poor private road to a farm is as great a handicap to efficient marketing as well as other farm operations, as a poor public highway. The fundamental principle involved in the construction of the two kinds of roads is the same, according to the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture. But, as the farm road is called on to bear far less traffic, the ordinary methods of construction and maintenance are so modified and the use of materials so adapted as to meet the special requirements and reduce the cost. To build the farm roads in the same manner and design as public thoroughfares which carry much greater traffic, in general, would be a useless waste of money.

The first consideration is the location of the roads and paths about the farm. The roads and paths are a part of the permanent farm plant. Consequently they should be so located as to serve best the purpose for which they are intended, should fit in with the general scheme of the farm and at the same time should avoid, as much as possible, places which would require difficult and expensive construction or maintenance. The main consideration, however, must be to secure the highest degree of efficiency from the farm plant as a whole.

Ideal Arrangement of Lanes.
The accompanying diagram, showing an ideal arrangement of farm buildings as well as of connecting lanes and drives, offers helpful suggestions to the farmer who is planning new vehicle ways in the immediate vicinity of his farm house. This particular arrangement is for a farmstead occupying a corner lot, which permits a side, end, or rear entrance from the public highway, this lane, running to the north, shown at the right side of the diagram, is a convenience in case stock is to be driven to the market, in that the animals need not be driven past the house, thereby subjecting shrubs, trees and the lawn to possible damage. One feature that should be taken into consideration in planning the roads near the farmhouse is the direction of the prevailing winds. In this instance the main entrance to the drive have been located to the north of the house, so that dust from them will ordinarily be carried away from the dwelling.

The earth road is the most common type of farm road and will probably so remain. When properly crowned, drained and maintained with the split-log drag or other similar device, the earth road, on all but a few exceptional soils or in a few places immediately around the farm lots and buildings, can be made to answer the requirements fairly well. A little grading will in general give the earth road a crown sloping from the center toward the side ditches at the rate of about one inch to the foot, and side ditches of sufficient size to carry away the storm water can usually be constructed without difficulty. If the ground is springy, the side ditches may be made deeper, or the ground water may be carried away by the drains.

Good Drainage Essential.
The fundamental requirement of an earth road is always good drainage. This involves, first, the removal of the water which reaches the surface of the road from precipitation or otherwise; and second, in certain places the removal of any ground water which seeps up. Surface drainage is accomplished by securing a reasonable firm crowned roadway and providing ditches of sufficient size and with ample grade and frequent outlets. Sub-drainage to remove the water from beneath the road surface or to prevent its passage into the roadway is usually accomplished most effectively by so-called blind drains or by means of properly located tile drains.

Roads and drives immediately around the farmyards and barns which are used very frequently are usually of sufficient importance to warrant some surface improvement. Inexpensive Surfacing Materials. Many of the materials ordinarily employed in road construction will be found too expensive for use in improving the farm roads. One or more of the following will, however, usually be found available and within the means of the farmer for surfacing his roads and paths: Gravel, mixtures of sand and clay, cinders, brickbats from old buildings, brickyard waste, and quarry waste. The material selected should be hard enough to withstand crushing under heavy loads and possess sufficient binding power to compact well and maintain a firm, hard surface.

Drainage and a good foundation are the first considerations in improving a road with a hard surface. The best possible foundation is a good earth road with a low crown. Earth should be graded upon each side to prevent the surfacing material from spreading, as in the construction of an ordinary macadam road. The material used for surfacing should be placed in a uniform layer or layers on this foundation and should be given a sufficient crown to shed the rain waters to the sides. If a road roller can be secured the material may be quickly consolidated.

During this process the road should receive frequent attention with a split-log drag or other means for smoothing the surface and filling the ruts. On steep grades where there would be a tendency for the side ditches to wash, this can usually be overcome by providing outlets and getting the water away from the road before it accumulates in large volume. On roads where wagons will not be required to pass each other, a width of from nine to twelve feet between ditches will usually be sufficient. The surfacing portion need rarely exceed seven or eight feet, though it can be carried to the ditches to advantage. There is no particular virtue in building a farm road wider than is necessary to answer the special traffic requirements. The need or desirability of moving occasionally extra wide or heavy implements, such as certain harvesting machines, over the road should, however, not be lost sight of. A little foresight in the alignment of ditches, or in providing ample width of gates, or in giving extra strength to culverts, may save a great deal of both annoyance and delay during some very busy period.

Making Good Footpaths.
For surfacing footpaths, gravel, mixtures of sand and clay, and cinders will, in general, give great satisfaction. Too often the mistake is made of building a path so low that it becomes a drainage channel. Concrete makes a most excellent walk, and is now widely used for this purpose. Full details as to mixing and placing concrete for walks and other uses on the farm are given in Farmers' Bulletin No. 461, "The Use of Concrete on the Farm," which may be had free from the United States department of agriculture.

GRASSHOPPERS NEXT SEASON

Killing by Poisoning and Plowing Are Most Effective Ways of Guarding 1920 Crop.

Each female grasshopper lays from 80 to 100 eggs, in clusters of 40 to 80 in small holes about 1 1/2 inches below the surface of the ground. Mr. Stewart Lockwood, entomologist for the North Dakota Agricultural college, says that if these eggs are allowed to hatch next year's crops are in serious danger. He states that killing by poisoning and plowing are the two most effective ways of safeguarding the 1920 crop. This year it was found that very few if any grasshoppers hatched out on plowed land. Sixty per cent of the hoppers came from roadsides, fence rows, flax stubble land, and 40 per cent from land that was stubbled into crop the fall of 1918.

The Bees.
The following incident testifies to the remarkable sagacity and efficiency of bees. A hive was being "spied upon" by a wasp. When wasps ascertain a hive is worth attacking they often succeed in ousting the bees. Every time the wasp approached the small entrance hole a bee came out. An hour later the wasp was dead.

It is estimated that something like 1,000,000 dead are interred in the Roman catacombs.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

Alma Bloom, a three year old girl, died at the home of her parents at Bloomington on Monday of consumption. Her remains were interred in the Bloomington cemetery yesterday afternoon.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Guy Forcey, at their home on Ridge avenue, on Monday, a daughter.

Bert Sipes, residing on Susquehanna avenue, South Side, is confined to his home by illness. He occupies a position as one of the foremen at the Summit Sled Leather Tannery.

Some time during Tuesday night or Wednesday morning, some person or persons made an attempt to burglarize the drug store of Jay Murphy.

Entrance was gained by springing the lock on the front door back far enough to allow the door to swing clear. Evidently the thief or thieves were frightened away before they had a chance to do any looting, as Mr. Murphy upon his arrival at the store found everything just as he had left it on closing the store late in the evening. Officer Clark is of the opinion that the work was done by someone about town, and had forced an entrance to the store in the hope of finding booze. Suspicion is pointing a finger at several persons, whose arrests may follow at any time.

Mrs. Richard Lantz was the recipient of a costly Christmas present at the hands of her father, Stewart Caldwell, consisting of the handsome brick dwelling house situated on the corner of Main and Pine streets. The property's value is not less than $5000.

William Knarr, residing along the Bloomington road died at the home of a daughter in Punxsutawney Tuesday, where he had gone to spend the holidays. About a year ago he purchased the John Caldwell property at the top of Irvin Hill, where he and his family resided. He was married to Miss Julia Garrison, a daughter of the late John Garrison, who survives him with several grown up children. His age was between 55 and 60 years. For some years he has been crippled and was compelled to use crutches, having been injured while working on a saw mill. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity. His remains were brought to Curwensville on Friday, the funeral taking place from the Presbyterian church. Interment in Oak Hill cemetery.

Charles E. Grace, of Clearfield, and Miss Lettie C. Jones of this place, were married at the home of the bride in Curwensville on Wednesday evening, December 24th at 8:30 o'clock by Rev. Dixon of Clearfield. Only the immediate families of the contracting parties were present to witness the ceremony. The young couple will make their home in Clearfield.

Frank Jones and daughter, of Williamsport, were Curwensville visitors this week, and were guests of Mr. Jones' half brothers, Messrs. Daniel and Owen Jones.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Moody, of Pottsville, Pa., are visitors in the family of Mrs. Ray Brown, a sister of Mr. Moody.

Day Kirk and wife, of Pittsburg, came to Curwensville in order that they might be with Mr. Kirk's mother Mrs. A. M. Kirk, over Christmas. After spending a few days in town, they left for New York. Mr. Kirk, being one of the officials of a large coal company, was called to attend a directors' meeting in that city. Mr. Kirk has, by efficiency and strict attention to his profession, become quite well known in the coal fields and by men largely connected with coal mining.

Sheridan Matley a foreman at the brick yard, is confined to his home by an attack of chicken pox.

The students attending the the public schools were given a half holiday yesterday, and a chance of compiling a list of New Year resolutions.

Ed. Wise, who made his home at D. C. Henchberger's, and who has suffered two operations in the Clearfield Hospital, is reported as getting along nicely, and expects to leave that institution shortly.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE By Mary Graham Donner

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

The Old Year and the New Year were seeing each other, and the New Year was talking of plans for 1920 while the Old Year talked of what had happened during 1919.

"Well," said the Old Year, "I am going to make up a poem about myself. I feel quite poetical."

"And," said the New Year, "I will, too." For the New Year didn't want to have the Old Year think that he was unable to do anything like that, even though he was young. He was rather proud and rather sure of himself, you see.

He didn't know much about poetry, and yet he didn't want to say so. But he felt very much pleased when the Old Year said: "Though I have lived twelve whole months, I have not become a poet. Writing poetry is not the thing I do best. But no matter, it is fun once in a while to write a little verse."

Yes, the New Year was much relieved to hear the Old Year say that he wasn't much on writing poetry, and no one could expect much of a year which was only just beginning.

And when I say that the New Year was relieved, mean that he didn't feel he had to worry about it any more, and if the Old Year had not

"My First Attempt."

said that, he might have worried for fear his poetry would sound very young beside that of the Old Year.

"Well, let's begin," said the Old Year.

"I think age should be given the right to speak first," said the New Year.

"All right," said the Old Year. "Here goes, then."

The Old Year shook his white hair and smiled so that the wrinkles in his face all ran in together.

This is what he said:

Nineteen-nineteen was feeling old. Nineteen-nineteen was also old. Nineteen-nineteen heard them cheer. Welcoming in the glad New Year.

Then New Year recited this verse:

Nineteen-nineteen was out for fun. His life had only just begun. He was young and full of vim. No one could help but welcome him.

"Of course," he added, "you mustn't think I am conceited. I say a lot to make my rhyme come out right."

"Of course," said the Old Year, "for I do, too. Well, I will give my second verse. Don't believe it all though!"

"I wish," said the New Year, "you'd give all the rest yourself."

"You're so much more of a poet than I am. It's my first attempt, and while it may be all right, I don't believe I could go on."

"All right," said the Old Year, "I'll go on. This is jolly—ending up the year and beginning the other with these verses. I believe I'll sing the rest of mine."

So the Old Year took an old harp he had and he began to play and sing and this was what he sang:

"Nineteen-nineteen almost went. As he packed up his things and left. But as he turned to say good-by, Something in him made him cry: 'Though my work is mostly done, I, too, have had lots of fun. And 'ere I go upon my way. This I certainly would say: 'Happy New Year, big and small. Happy New Year, short and tall. Happy New Year, every one. May you all have lots of fun!'"

"Fine," said the New Year. "And though your voice is old—a whole year old—still it doesn't sound cracked."

"You must have been a nice year to have kept so young in so many ways."

"Ah," said the Old Year, "all the years have such a good time. Wait until you've been in the world a year. You will have seen so much to make you feel young and happy though you are old and must make way for another year. Wait and see! Good-by! Happy New Year!"

Take the World We Find.
We must take the world as we find it; there is no avoiding that. But we ought not to leave the world as we found it; there would be no excuse for that. A large share of our proper work in life ought to be in the line of seeing to it that the world shall be better, when we leave it, than it was when we entered it, simply because we have been in it. Otherwise our life is a failure.—Selected.

Boxing Fans Hoot Stalling Fighters

Referee Edwards Stops Fiasco At End of Ninth Round After Warning Men To Play Fair

SUCH EXHIBITIONS HURT SPORT

Clearfield boxing fans and Manager McCowan of the Clearfield Athletic club were given a raw deal New Year's afternoon by Johnny Wolgast, of Lancaster and Kid Sheeler, of Philadelphia, who were scheduled to put on a ten round boxing exhibition at the Driggs theatre.

The show had been pretty well advertised and several hundred local and out of town boxing enthusiasts were present when after three or four good preliminaries Referee "Tunk" Edwards announced the "crime of the afternoon." Referee Edwards sort of prepared the wise ones for what was coming when he announced the principals desired to have the bout cut from ten to six rounds. The crowd demanded the scheduled number of rounds and the alleged scrapers then made their way reluctantly to the ring.

They started right in to slap and stall and before the first round ended the spectators were on and began to "beat" the scrapers. The second round was worse than the first and everybody got right up in arms. The boxers stalled along until the seventh round and began to file out. Referee Edwards stopped the fiasco long enough to inform the fighters that they would have to fight or they would get no money. This quieted the crowd and they returned to their seats.

The men then stalled through another round and were lovingly tapping each other in the ninth when the Referee stopped further proceedings and the pickers were hooted out of the ring.

Wolgast had appeared in Clearfield twice previously and had made many friends by his aggressive tactics in the ring, but never again for cars. This was Sheeler's first appearance in Clearfield and again was very much enough or too much if that sounds better.

Such exhibitions as these men gave hurt the sport and is greatly regretted by the management and friends of boxing. The management has been endeavoring to and up to this time had succeeded in putting on clean, classy shows. They were not to blame for this exhibition and will attempt to square themselves by keeping away from such tin horn sports as Wolgast and Sheeler in the future.

The preliminaries consisted of wrestling bouts between D'Augustino and Meise, and Bill Gardiner and Ward Latschaw. They were well worth seeing. Gardiner is the best 145 pound wrestler in Central Pennsylvania, bar nobody, and challenges any man of his weight to meet him on the mat at any time and place.

Young Cole and Sammy Sansone put up a slashing six round bout. Cole had a little more science but Sammy was at him hammer and tongs all the way.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts to flush out your Kidneys and neutralize irritating acids.

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again. Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effective, uric acid-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

TURN HAIR DARD WITH SAGE TEA

Grandma kept her locks dark, glossy and youthful with a simple mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustrous and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

THE GLASS CASKET CORPORATION

Is The Great New Opportunity For Investors Today

The year of 1919 has been a wonderful year with our company. We have succeeded in practically completing our new plant at Altoona and expect that during the month of March of the incoming year; we will start the fires under the huge glass furnace, and at this time next year we will be employing between 400 and 700 men and women.

That means that the stockholders in the Glass Casket Corporation will indeed have a prosperous year, not only in 1920 but for many years to come for our market is unlimited, and the possibilities of profits very great.

Any man or woman can recognize the merits of an investment proposition AFTER it has become a success. But the man or woman who amasses riches is the one who can recognize merit BEFORE the proposition has been developed into a success,--the one who cashes in big by investing in a proposition at the very start.

Stories of great fortunes are the stories of new inventions and new ideas that make good. America has remarkable examples of this in the Libbey Glass Company, the Owens Bottle Machine Company, the Bell Telephone Company, the National Cash Register, the Eastman Kodak Company and scores of others. Trace any of these industries back to their beginning and you will find that hundreds of people sneered at them, where one was foresighted enough to invest in them. The Glass Casket Corporation is the great NEW opportunity for investors today. Like the marvelous successful companies listed above, it is organized to manufacture a WORLD NECESSITY, and it controls valuable patents. It has the exclusive rights to operate in the eleven great Eastern states. It opens up a field never before touched, and its prospects are for profits that are amazing. Most men recognize opportunity only when it has passed them by,--AND MOST MEN ARE POOR ALL THEIR LIVES. Here you are brought face to face with opportunity! Can you recognize it?

We invite you to call at our Clearfield office as our Representative will be unable to call on everyone personally but will be glad to do so if necessary. We have established a sales office in Clearfield for your convenience, and the opportunity is now offered you to become a stockholder in this new industrial enterprise. No preferred stock will be issued. No Bonds will be floated, only common stock will be sold, thus insuring that EVERY stock holder will share in every cent the corporation earns.

Practical Frocks of Silk or Wool

Two afternoon frocks of the simple and unpretentious sort that prove most useful are shown in the picture above. One of them is in taffeta silk in a dark blue and the other in wool tricotine in the same color. They are both very practical dresses and the tricotine will be found equal to taking the place of a suit skirt and blouse, or separate skirt and blouse, for all day wear. It is the sort of dress that becomes useful for the street or business, worn with a fur piece or separate coat.

The taffeta dress is one of several popular models in which narrow flounces of the silk play an important part. In some of these the skirt is a series of overlapping flounces, of scant fullness, and each about five inches wide. They are set to a foundation and terminate just below the hip line. Above this the plain taffeta is gathered into the belt at the waistline. Bodices in the several models vary, some of them having no flounces in their finishing, and a favorite for them is the surplice style. In the dress shown above the skirt is draped at the sides and a group of three flounces set on diagonally suggests a tunic high at one side. Above this group a second flounce follows the same diagonal line. The tail for the girles of heavy, Roman-striped ribbon is an advantage that the designer of this frock did not overlook. It is the best possible finishing touch and besides ensuring the waist it follows the line of the flounces and makes a chic affair of a simple dress. In this model flounces appear on the sleeves and at the neck.

The frock of tricotine has an attractive and simple bodice that fastens along the shoulder and underarm at one side. It is cut with a round neck rather high and a pattern in stitched-on braid that has the appearance of embroidery, outlines a pointed collar. The bodice extends a little below the waistline, where the skirt is set on in a way that widens the hips a little. A narrow band of the embroidery ornaments the front of the bodice and a similar band, but wider, is placed about the skirt. Small, flat, close-covered buttons extend in a close-set row below this band to the bottom of the skirt. The soft girle at the waist is made of tricotine and the long sleeves flare a little and are finished with a narrow band of embroidery in the same pattern as the other bands. This little flare in the sleeves, the very slightly widened hips, the easy adjustment of the bodice, are all new style notes that the designer has adapted, with becoming restraint, to a wool frock that is intended to be practical.

Julia Bottrulsky

Value of Quick Decision.

As a rule the man who has trained himself to quick decisions and prompt actions follows close to the right. He does not need to debate questions as does the man who has become a master of deliberation. His mental faculties seem to work automatically and they are generally right. I'm not sure but that they are more often right than they are with the man who is constantly weighing pros and cons and becoming confused with the issues. He saves time because he acts quickly and he saves everybody the uncertainty of indecision.

Flowers.

Flowers are perhaps the most effective of the many little "glorifying touches" necessary to an attractive home. There are thousands of persons with beautiful houses, costly furnishings, perhaps, artistically and skillfully arranged by the hands of a clever decorator, but it takes the little finishing touches, the seemingly unimportant tiny things, done by the woman who loves and exists for her home and expresses her soul in her surroundings to make the house lovable.—Exchange.

New Telephone Table.

An inventor has invented a compact telephone table which can be folded to even smaller dimensions for moving from room to room.

Why the Weather Bureau?

Why the weather bureau? This question is likely to be asked, in more or less querulous tones, whenever the local weather prediction fails, as it often does, says the Popular Science Monthly. The bureau overlooks the fact that the weather bureau has much more important things to forecast than ordinary changes of weather. It predicts with certainty great windstorms, destructive floods, severe freezes and other atmospheric visitations that endanger life and property on a large scale and collects climatic statistics for scientific agriculture.

Importance of "Now."

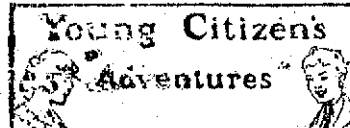

"Now" is ever ticking from the clock of time. "Now" is the watchword of the wise. "Now" is on the banner of the prudent. Let us keep this little word always in our mind, and whenever anything presents itself to us in the shape of work, whether mental or physical, let us do it with all our might, remembering that now is the only time for us.—Selected.

After Thirty-Four Years.

Hunting Eye Goes to School

BY J. H. MILLER

The school bell was ringing as Hunting Eye came in. Several children were running into the school house. Hunting Eye followed them and sat down in the back of the room. At first, all the pupils and the teacher looked at him curiously. Soon, however, their strangeness wore off and, presently, one offered him a book and another, a pencil and, before long, they were quite friendly.

When recess came, they all gathered round the boy from the North Woods and asked him all manner of questions. When their questioning died down a bit, the Indian boy began to ask a few himself.

"What is this?" said he.

"A school."

"Yes, a school where you learn reading and writing and geography and such things."

"Who runs it?" asked Hunting Eye.

"The teacher."

"Here comes Teacher, ask her."

"The state government runs the schools," said the teacher. "Long ago, the government did not think the schools important enough to take up its time in running them. So they were carried on by private persons and anyone who wanted to go to school had to pay for that privilege. Soon, however, the men who were running the government saw that one of the most important things they could do would be to provide an education for all the boys and girls of the state. So they established free schools for every one."

"Does the state run this school?"

"Yes, through the township. You see, in most states, each township is divided into school districts with one school in each district. In the city, the districts often cover the same area as the wards. All the districts in the township are grouped under one head. The township boards are under the County Superintendent. The State Superintendent is over all the schools in the state. In the city, the schools are all under the City Superintendent who is usually directly under the State Superintendent. The head of the schools is generally chosen by the School Board, the members of which are, in most cases, elected by the people. The Board also chooses the teachers and carries on a good deal of the business of the schools."

"The Federal Government has a Bureau of Education which studies school problems and aids the state schools in many ways."

Whales That Walked.

Whales used to walk. That is the statement of Prof. D'Arcy Thompson, authority on fishes of the sea, in a lecture on that subject at the Royal Institution, London. He said the whale originally had four feet or fins, but that the two hind ones had simply devolved away. In bygone ages ancestors of the present family of whales walked about much as seals do.

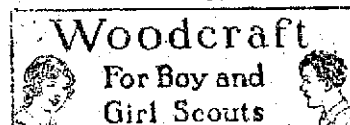

Thunder and Lightning.

Thunder is caused by electric discharge of lightning. This discharge, in forcing its way through the atmosphere, heats the air and vaporizing it in its path to a high temperature, causing a violent expansion along the whole length of the flash. The result is a deep compression wave, or what is the same, a noise. Lightning is the flash of the electric explosion.

Inflamed Eyes.

Nothing brings surer relief to inflamed eyes than a wash with boracic acid water. And one thing that its user must remember is to have the preparation free from any foreign particles, however minute, or they will cause irritation. The boracic acid should be thoroughly dissolved in water that has been boiled and cooled.

Woodcraft For Boy and Girl Scouts

BY ANGELA ELLE BEARD

Trailing is something like the game of hide and seek, only vastly more exciting, for, instead of scraps of paper to follow, you have the tracks of wild creatures. And when you discover the tracks tell a story and that you and the story, you immediately and automatically decide that trailing out is a more game and that of all the interesting parts of woodcraft, it is the most interesting.

In trailing to read the strange tales that really become a detective of the wild, and the more practice you have the longer the stories grow, because there are a number of things about tracks that you do not see in the beginning. At first, you have to give your mind to identifying and following the tracks, but later you will notice whether they are fresh or old, whether the animal was running fast or traveling as a slow pace. If going at full speed, there will probably be tracks of a single foot down in that case, one will generally find at the end signs of a track which did not end exactly at the desired animal.

To track a deer to follow the trail of the deer is followed with snow, but even in the footprints clearly, but not all the time and so will not be sure. You can sometimes find tracks that are almost a day old. Even over a rough, hilly country may be a track in a short time where you can find tracks of some kind of wild animal. They may be expert tracks that lead into close clusters which show the deep impressions of long hind feet, a deer's narrow tracks, the delicate footprints of the weasels and the tracks of the muskrat.

Remember that a deer track resembles that of a cat but is very much smaller. A cat track is like a deer's with often the imprint of hairs between the toes, sharp and spoked, whereas a deer track, only the squirrel's are a good deal larger.

Coal's Uncertain History.

The story of coal is a very uncertain one. No one seems to know when it first began to be used for fuel. All through the centuries it pops in and out of English literature as something taken for granted, and when it was finally found well in the van of the great industrial expansion of a century or more ago it occasioned no special comment.

Ladies' Bazaar

Two Lonely Souls

By ALDEN CHAPMAN

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union)

A lovely pink rose described a chile in the air over the fence surrounding the grounds of a large rambling old fashioned house and landed directly against the breast of Bruno Paxton. He clutched it as it was headed for the ground, glanced up and met the flashing eyes and smiling face of a lady half concealed by the shrubbery. Then the latter darted away pursued by a little girl who her apron full of flowers, pelted her out of view with the fragrant flowers.

Somewhere the mind of Bruno was set in a turmoil. Had the lady in the floral battle aimed at her child or parent or at himself? At all events the episode set his mind in a whirl. He had reached thirty the same impossible idealist that he had been at twenty. He treasured the rose and dreamed dreams. He passed the same place slowly the next day. Half obscured by some lilies was a feminine form. Bruno slightly raised his hat. Unmistakably in response there was the flutter of a handkerchief. He was noticed. It must be the lady of the rose battle. A vast ferment of sentiment and romanticism took place in his soul. The next morning it was raining but from an upper window in the house a white hand moved as if in notice of greeting.

Passing down the street the next day with his close friend Dale Armstrong Bruno clutched his hat feverishly and indicating a lady crossing from the house now his center of attraction to an automobile, and whose face was that of the lady of the roses he uttered tumultuously.

Armstrong you know everybody in town. Who is that girl?

Gilly repeated Dale. She is a married woman—Mrs. Walter Martin. Husband and child. What's your interest?

Nothing. He flattered in a sort of a collapsing youth. Love blasted my ideal vanished. Only a flirt. He told himself in a suppressed undertone. It was the rude blighting of a possible romance in his budding that so crushed Bruno. He had woven a fairy fabric of idealism and it was humiliating depressing disappointing to have it thus sent scuttling. Armstrong coming in to his office the next day found him seated morose and hollow eyed at the window, staring out blankly at nothingness.

What's the trouble Bruno. he had said in his cheery off hand way.

Oh tired of life and its false promises. Returned the other dismally. I don't seem to reach any goal in my experiences. Tell you I'm almost suicidal in my present mood.

That sort of talk is out of place. Will ever in my office I've got a real glittering silver a fine and honest deadly revolver and a bottle of sure thing cyanide. Want to make a choice?

Thank you no. answered Bruno. Surely notified at the badinage good natured as it was. If I ever stop off abruptly the water route is the wisest and cheapest.

There seemed to be a satisfaction in musing his dark ideas. Bruno did not cheat himself by trying to believe that he had been incriminated by the lady of the roses. His verge of romance had attracted him but he had only glimpsed its outlines when fate had abruptly transformed it into a dreary desert.

Oh for one true sympathetic soul! he pondered as he left his home his way homeward.

It was winter and he took off his coat. He was to sleep and rest and began pulling up and down. He got directly up to the edge of the emerald blanket overlooking the stream.

A splash of water not so cruel as a harsh disappointing world. He uttered in indignantly.

No—no—surely you are not thinking of—

Bruno started. A slender woman came Bruno had never seen her. He did not know that it was she who had thrown the blue slip in his path and had followed him. She was fair of face and gentle of form although as far up in the twenties as himself.

There was a gentle sympathy in her eyes that somehow won upon him. If you mean I was going to jump in. he said. No I'd ought to think of—

Thank of your friends? I have none. Nobody cares for me.

And you never noticed the blue slip. reproachfully censured this sentimental spatter—after bowing to me in the garden and responding with a smile to my waving from the window?

Oh it was you. exclaimed Bruno. I haven't embodied in my sister Mrs. Martin continued Miss Belle Weston. But it has been very pleasant to think I was making a manly sympathy here. A faint smile.

She hung her head now. Bruno took another look at her understanding her error as to the roses. He pulled her enthusiasm in himself. He appreciated her interest in himself.

We seem to be two lonely ones. he said. We come together in a queer way don't we? Well maybe it is fate.

You wouldn't ever think again of that horrid river and all that would you? pleaded Belle.

As long as you care about it. responded Bruno tenderly.

Disposing of the stolen stock in the town of Esopus, Ariz., the band separates. Curly and his partner staying in town. They are awakened and told a posse is in town in pursuit of them. They elude their pursuers. Overland next day, Mac is killed by the posse and Curly, made captive, after he has shot one and himself been wounded. The man shot is Luck Cullison.

CHAPTER II.—Cullison's friends, all gentlemen, determine to track Curly as an example to cattle thieves. With the rope around his neck he is saved by the intervention of Kate Cullison, Luck's daughter.

CHAPTER III.—The wound dressed, and further violence not apprehended, Curly is sent for by Cullison. He questions the boy concerning a notorious outlaw, Sonny Stone, real leader of the rustlers who had been Curly's partner. Esopus leaves the Sonny Stone is Curly's bitter enemy and exercises a baleful influence over the ex-sheriff's son. Curly, who has quarreled with his father, Cullison goes back for Curly.

CHAPTER IV.

A Bear Trap.

The winding trail led up to the scrub pines and from there north into the hills. Curly had not traveled far when he heard the sound of a gun fired three times in quick succession. He stopped to listen. Presently there came a faint call for help.

Curly, cantered around the shoulder of the hill and saw a man squatting on the ground. He was stooped forward in an awkward fashion with his back to Phyllis.

"What's up?"

At the question the man looked over his shoulder. Pale and helpless rage burned in the deepest black eyes.

"Nothing at all. Don't you see I'm just taking a nap?" he answered quietly.

Curly recognized him now. The man was Sonny Stone. Little beads of perspiration stood out all over his forehead. A glance showed the reason. One of his hands was caught in a bear trap fastened to a cottonwood. His jaws held him so that he could not move.

The young man swung from the back of Stone. He found the limb of a cottonwood about as thick as his forearm below the elbow. This he set close to the trap.

"Soon as I get the lip open shove her in," he told Stone.

The rescuer slipped the toes of his boots over the lower lip and caught don't up and Laura sent him at once for the doctor. She led the way into the house and swiftly gathered bandages, a sponge and a basin of water. Together she and Curly bathed and wrapped the wound.

"What's Up?"

Laura was as gentle as she could be. "I know I'm hurting you," she said, her fingers trembling.

"Not a bit of it. Great pleasure to have you for a nurse. I'm certainly in luck." Curly did not understand the bitterness in the sardonic face and he resented it.

That something was wrong between them Curly could see. Sonny was very polite in spite of his bitterness, but his hard eyes watched her as a cat does a mouse. Moreover, the girl was afraid of him. He could tell that by the timid startled way she had of answering. Now, why need she fear the man? It would be as much as his life was worth to lift a hand to hurt her.

After the doctor had come and had attended to the crushed wrist Curly stepped out to the porch to find Laura. "I'm right sorry for what I said. Miss Laura. There in a while a fellow makes a mistake. It's as big a blunder as I can make to happen a little often. But I'm not really one of those smart guys."

Out came her gloved hand in the first of grips.

"I know that now. You didn't think I made a mistake. I thought you were taking advantage because I had been friendly. I'm glad you spoke about it. Well, forget it. There's something I want you to do for me."

"I expect maybe I'll do it."

"It's about that boy he has of there." She gave a hopeless little gesture toward the hills.

"Sonny Cullison?"

"Yes."

"What about him?"

"He's bent on ruining him, always has been ever since he got a hold on him. I can't tell you how I know it but I'm sure. And now he's more set on it than ever."

"Jealous is he?"

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—January 17, instead of January 16, will be the birthday of constitutional prohibition the Collector of Internal Revenue has decided. Enforcement of constitutional prohibition will start at 12:01 a. m. January 17, Commissioner Roper said. The constitutional amendment was to become effective exactly one year after the thirty-sixth state ratified it but no one seems to know at what hour on January 16, 1919 the thirty-sixth state acted. Under these conditions if the war time ban would be lifted or peace proclaimed it would give a few hours more in which to reduce the large amount of liquor in the country.

PNEUMONIA LEFT BOY WEAK AND SICKLY

Parents Were Almost Hopeless, But He Is Now Well and Strong.

"Our little boy's health was so poor we were afraid we were going to lose him. He is 10 years old, and has had weak lungs ever since he was eight months old, caused by pneumonia. We have been very careful with him and doctor him continually, but we had almost despaired of ever having a strong, well boy."

But since giving him Milla's Emulsion, all his trouble is gone, and he is in perfect health."—Mrs. G. W. Smiley, 20 Maple St., Dayton, O.

For restoring appetite, health and strength in sickly children, mothers will find Milla's Emulsion the thing they have always sought. Most children like to take it, because unlike many emulsions and tonics, it really tastes good.

Milla's Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, acting easily with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. As a builder of flesh and strength, Milla's Emulsion is strongly recommended to those whose sickness has weakened, and is a powerful aid in resisting and repelling the effects of wasting diseases. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day.

This is the only cod emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milla's Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions and if not satisfied with the results, your money will be promptly refunded. Price the net $1.20 per bottle. The Milla's Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.

"Yes. If he can drag Sam down and get him into trouble he'll pay two grudges at once. And he will. You'll see. He's wily as a snake. For that matter there is Apache blood in him, folks say."

"What about young Callison? Can't he make a fight for himself?"

"Oh, you know how boys are. He is completely under this man's influence." Her voice broke a little. "And I can't help him. I'm only a girl. I won't listen to me. What Sam needs is a man friend, one just as strong and determined as Soapy but one who is good and the right sort of a man."

"Are you picking me for that responsible friend who is to be a powerful influence for good?" Carly asked with a smile.

"Yes—yes, I am." She looked up at him confidently.

Curly met her on the ground of her own seriousness. "I'll tell you something, Miss Laura. Maybe you're glad to know that the reason for going to the horse ranch is to help Callison if I can."

He went on to tell her the whole story of what the Callisons had done for him. In all that he said there was not one word to suggest such a thing as Laura London's mind jumping the gaps to a knowledge of the truth that Carly himself did not have. The young man was in love with Kate Callison. She was sure of it.

When Carly walked back into the house, Stone laid down the paper he had been reading.

"I see the Sentinel hints that Carly Flandrau had better be lynched," he jeered.

"The Sentinel don't always hit the bull's-eye, Soapy," returned the young man evenly. "It thinks I belong to the Soapy Stone outfit, but we know I haven't that honor."

Soapy frowned at him under the heavy eyebrows that gave him so menacing an effect.

"Better come back with me to the ranch till you look around."

"Suits me right down to the ground if it does you."

Some one came whistling into the house and opened the door of the room. He was a big lank fellow with a shotgun in his hands. "From the south" was stamped all over his awkward frame. He stood staring at the unexpected guests. His eyes, shining with those of Stone, grew chill and hard.

"So you're back here again, are you?" he asked, looking pretty black. Stone's lips smile mocked him. "I don't know how you guessed it, but I sure am here."

"Didn't I tell you to keep away from the Bar 99—you and your whole circus outfit?"

"Seems to me you did mention something of that sort. But how was I to know whether you meant it unless I came back to see?"

Laura came into the room and ranged herself beside her father. Her hand rested lightly on his forearm.

"He got caught in one of your bear traps and this young man brought him here to wait for the doctor," she explained.

"Hmp!"

The Missourian stared without civility at his guest, turned on his heel, and with his daughter beside him marched out of the room. He could not decently tell Stone to leave while he was under the care of a doctor, but he did not intend to make him welcome.

"We'll pull our freight right away, Carly," Stone announced as soon as his host had gone.

The young man went to the stable and saddled Keno. While he was tightening the cinch a shadow fell across his shoulder. He did not need to look round to see whose it was.

"I'm so glad you're going to the horse ranch. You will look out for Sam. I don't know why, but I have the greatest confidence in you," the owner of the shadow explained sweetly.

Curly smiled blandly over his shoulder at her. "That's a good thing, Miss Laura. A little line of talk, Miss Laura. What is it I'm to do for you?"

She blushed and laughed at the same time. Her hand came from behind her back. In it was a letter.

"That's to be my pay for giving Master Sam his billy dog, is it?"

"How did you guess? It is a letter to Sam."

"How did I guess it? Guess I'm sure a wiz, don't I?"

She saw her father coming and handed him the letter quickly.

"Here. Take it." A spark of mischief lit her eye and the dimples came out on her cheeks. "Good-by, Carly."

TRUE LOVE WINS OVER OBSTACLES IN STATE LAWS

Pretty English Miss Comes To This Country To Wed Brady Township Yank

COURT SMOOTHS THE PATH

"Love will find a way," time, space, legal formalities and other unforeseen and ever-present obstacles to the contrary notwithstanding. This fact was demonstrated at the Court House Wednesday. It is a long, though happy, story shipmates, and will take some time in the telling, but as "everybody loves a lover" and also loves to hear, see or read of true love surmounting all obstacles, we are going to give it to you, secure in the belief that you will follow us on the we are perforce required to go more than three thousand miles afield to gather the threads from which this story is woven.

But here goes, at the beginning. On December 15, 1917, Jesse Johnson, a Brady township boy, enlisted in Uncle Sam's air service as a private away out in Portland, Oregon. After seven months in training at an aviation camp Private Johnson was sent overseas on July 15, 1918, and after dodging German subs in due course of time arrived in London. He was sent to an English training camp and while fitting himself for a go with the Hun found time to make the acquaintance of a pretty little English girl named Elsie Cathrall.

Johnson had the real American spirit or pep and straightly plunged heels over head into love for the fair ally. The feeling was reciprocated and matters were getting quite serious when along came the signing of the armistice with peace for and with everybody but Senator Lodge. Coincident therewith Johnson's outfit was ordered out of England forthwith.

The recall order played havoc with the plans of the lovers, but Mars triumphed at this stage of the game and the soldier was forced to bid his innamorata a tearful farewell and accompany his outfit back to God's country. He arrived in this country December 4, 1918, and was promptly mustered out of the service.

The lovers promised to be true to each other even though cruel fate in the shape of your Uncle Samuel placed more than three thousand miles of stormy ocean between them. With them it was not a case of "out of sight out of mind," but absence made each heart grow fonder, if such thing were possible under the circumstances.

During the past twelve months many tender missives from Luthersburg and London passed each other en route and the upshot of the correspondence resulted in Miss Cathrall leaving her English home and setting sail for the land of the free and the home of her brave.

This morning the happy young people presented themselves at the office of Register and Recorder Chase and asked for a marriage license. Deputy Recorder George W. Gulich got busy at once and started to issue the desired permit. The groom-to-be answered the required questions without a hitch and the blushing bride was equally as prompt with her answers until the age question was reached. When asked how old she was Miss Cathrall demurely replied, "Nineteen." The genial deputy then asked if she had the consent of her parents to the marriage and when given a negative answer, politely informed the young couple that their consent in writing would have to be secured or there would be no wedding.

Can you imagine the situation. After traveling three thousand miles across a storm-tossed ocean to wed the man of your choice only to find that a stern old Pennsylvania law interposed an almost insurmountable barrier.

"Consternation reigned" with the young people until the genial deputy came to the assistance of Dan Gulich by suggesting an appeal to Judge Bell. The Judge was located by telephone at his residence and when acquainted with the circumstances said no Pennsylvania statute should be allowed to stand in the way of any young lady who came that far to wed a Clearfield county boy and thus become a real American citizen. He told Deputy Gulich that he would appoint him Miss Cathrall's guardian, which would empower him to give his consent to the marriage of his ward and all would be well, he hoped.

Wearing smiles that simply couldn't be chased away, the again happy youngsters beat it back to the Recorder's office and soon the coveted permit was in their hands. After Wyoming county, February 21, 1847. He came to Covington township when he was sixteen years of age and all the rest of her life was spent in Covington and Karthaus townships.

He was united in marriage with Mary Reiter fifty years ago. They were a most devoted couple and their home life was beautiful in character. Mr. Evans was a great lover of young people and of music and their home was the gathering place for all the young people of the community.

He was a most devoted father and a very kind neighbor. He was beloved in the community because he followed in the footsteps of his Master who went about doing good.

He was actively engaged in lumbering and farming for many years. He was a good business man and possessed the strictest integrity.

He lived a faithful member of the Oak Hill Lutheran church and was active in all departments of church work as long as he was able. He was an Elder in the church, served two years as Sunday school superintendent and was for many years the Bible Class teacher.

He is survived by his wife and three children, Harry Evans, Wilcox, Pa., Frank Evans, Pottersburg and Mrs. Wilbur Carr, Pottersburg.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock from the Oak Hill Lutheran Church. Interment at Oak Hill.

C. W. Baker soon pronounced them man and wife. They left for Luthersburg on the 11:48 train happy as clams.

True Poetry.

True poetry, like true eloquence, is the voice of nature, appealing to the heart with its utmost subtlety and power. . . . Instead of teaching merely, it persuades, elevates, inspires. It excites a feeling where the other leaves an opinion or a maxim. It proposes examples of ideal excellence, and raises virtue into heroism.—Hugh Swinburn Legard.

Measuring Rainfall.

The quantity of rain which falls is measured by rain-gauges or pluviometers, which are variously constructed. One of the best is that known as Symon's rain-gauge, consisting of a funnel-shaped revolving vessel to catch the rain, and a glass measure of small diameter to measure it. To simplify calculation, the internal area of the measure is usually one-tenth that of the mouth of the funnel.

Smart Clothes

To the casual observer, clothes are just clothes—mostly all alike. Yet there is an important difference between the general run of ready-to-wear clothes and Stein-Bloch clothes.

You can readily see the pattern and the style in any suit. But the wearing quality—the serviceability—of clothes depends largely upon the unseen things—the linings, the needlework, the tailoring. These unseen things you take on faith.

Yet not entirely on faith, because the Stein-Bloch label, which stands for Sixty-Three Years of Knowing How is a pledge of quality in itself. And our label endorses it.

You begin to fully appreciate STEIN-BLOCH SMART CLOTHES only after such service as would have put ordinary clothes into the discard. It is this inherent quality of continued smartness—smartness as long as the woollens hold together—that makes Stein-Bloch the choice of men who know.
